

ばしっ (bashitt)

1. "The sound made when dry wood etc. is violently broken or struck".
2. "One's way of speaking or one's actions being firm and decisive".

I think sensei is meaning the second one. Unless he's saying it as he hits someone, in which case probably the first.

From:

Title: A Practical Guide to Japanese Onomatopoeia & Mimesis

Author: Ono, Hideichi

ISBN: 4-590-00722-3

色々 【いろいろ】 (iroiro)

This means "various" and is probably not actually onomatopoeia, but sensei used it in class many times today.

From:

<http://www.csse.monash.edu.au/~jwb/wwwjdic.html>